

WEISINGER LECTURE

Friedrich Schiller in the Jewish Provinces: Fradel Shtok and the Aesthetics of Jewish Prose

Allison Schachter, Vanderbilt University

TUESDAY
March 6th, 2018

5:00 pm Lecture &
Light Refreshments

3335 Dwinelle Hall
UC Berkeley Campus

RSVP by email to:
jewishstudies@berkeley.edu

Celebrated as the poet who wrote the first sonnet in Yiddish, Fradel Shtok was also a masterful modernist stylist. She published a single collection of short fiction in 1919 that was dismissed by critics for its embrace of prose techniques that made her more akin to Flaubert than to Sholem Aleichem. The lore about Shtok is that traumatized by negative reviews, she repudiated Yiddish, and died in an asylum. This was not true: she continued to write in Yiddish, and died in LA years after news of her tragic death. Why was the literary establishment so quick to “kill her off”? This talk examines Shtok’s modernist feminist aesthetic and offers a revised account of Yiddish modernism--one that acknowledges the centrality of woman to the project of the modern Jewish revolution.

Allison Schachter is Associate Professor of English and Jewish Studies, and Director of the Program in Jewish Studies at Vanderbilt University. She is the author of Diasporic Modernisms: Hebrew and Yiddish Literature in the Twentieth Century (Oxford 2012). She is currently working on a book entitled: On Jewish Prose: Women Writing Jewish Modernity in the Twentieth Century. She has published widely in a range of journals including, PMLA, mlq, Comparative Literature, and Jewish Social Studies. At Vanderbilt, she is a founding member of the Trans Area Literature Collective.

Berkeley | CENTER FOR JEWISH STUDIES

DEPARTMENT of COMPARATIVE LITERATURE
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, BERKELEY

Department of Gender & Women's Studies